Coleman Residents Prompt With Tax Payments

Further evidence that Coleman is carrying on despite the closure of one mine is shown in the figures released regarding payment of town taxes.

To date 85% of all taxes have been paid, 88% of the property tax and 80% of the business tax.

Most business places report a fairly steady business for this time of year, while the town itself is showing the way by carrying out extensive improvements around town.

Blood Donor Clinic To Visit Hospital September 7

The travelling Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic will be at the Crow's Nest Pass Municipal Hospital on September 7th. The clinic will operate during both the afternoon and evening.

Mrs. M. Dunford, Blood Donor Convenor for Coleman announced that nurses and others are canvassing the town, but emphasizes that no appointment is necessary. J. Parks has been appointed in charge of transportation and cars will operate from the Grand Union hotel parking lot.

Coleman residents are asked to support this worthwhile campaign and help to beat the commendable showing of The Pass last year.

FRANCES DIBBLEE WINS ANOTHER SCHOLARSHIP

Miss Frances Dibblee was awarded a singing scholarship offered by the Banff School of Fine Arts for study next summer.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Dibblee of Coleman, Frances returned to Calgary last fall following two years study in the east. During the celebration of Back Home Week here last summer she was a member of the local talent show "Yours to Remember".

Coleman residents have followed Frances' career and extend to her their heartiest best wishes and congratulations.

Alta.-B.C. Border Check Suggested

According to a report of the Pernie Chamber of Commerce, President George Lees told the meeting that he had been approached to ask the Chamber to request the establishment of a border check station at the provincial border at Crow's Nest.

Such a station, he said, would be very useful to the Forestry, R.C.M.P. and the Provincial Consumption and Amusement (5%) Tax Department. Some members thought the station might protect local merchants who were losing customers who would rather buy in Alberta than pay the 5% sales tax. Most members were of the opinion the station would be a nuisance to the travelling public. The proposition will be investigated and a report made to the next meeting.

Dot, Niemeyer's female, is expected to have her first batch of pups this week. All male pups will be for sale.

The prize-winning design for the Alberta Golden Jubilee Calendar, drawn by Charles Tweed, of Edmonton, is shown here on the engraving camera ready for the first step in the production process. The three judges of the contest, shown here left to right, are: Hugh Kane, vice-president of McClelland and Stewart Ltd., Toronto, the publishing company who awarded Mr. Tweed the $500 prize; Fred Southam, general manager of Southern Press, (Toronto); and William M. Rogers, vice-president of Howett and Smith Ltd. All are from Toronto.

Charles Tweed, 24 of Edmonton, is the winner of a province-wide competition for a cover design for the Alberta Golden Jubilee Calendar, and the recipient of a $500 prize awarded by McClelland & Stewart Ltd., Toronto. It was announced today by the Hon. C. E. Gerhart, Chairman of Alberta's Golden Jubilee Committee.

The prize winning design is a symbolic drawing done in the modern manner, with elements representing the various phases of the provincial scene — wheat, oil, lumbering, dairying, ranching, mining and industry. The cover is to be reproduced in seven colors plus gold, and will symbolize the contents of the calendar which, in some 18 full color pages, will represent through the year, Alberta in her most exciting and lovely moments.

Mr. Tweed is a graduate of the Chicago Academy of Fine Art. He was born at Lethbridge and came to Edmonton in 1937. He attended Edmonton schools, graduating from Garneau High School. His wife is also an artist. The Tweeds met when they were attending the Chicago Academy. Mr. Tweed is practicing as a free-lance artist in Edmonton and is the acting art director for James Lovick Ltd. of Edmonton.

The Jubilee Calendar is to be offered for sale in the near future and will be ready for distribution by November 20. Orders may be placed for the calendar with the Golden Jubilee Committee.

Wrap Up Your Hope Chest

Every housewife has in her closet a store of linen articles which she does not use very often. It may be a damask tablecloth for twelve, a set of colored bed-sheets and pillowcases or a dozen embroidered guest towels that were part of her hope chest. Keeping these fresh and ready for use at a moment's notice is often a problem because dust leaves marks at the corners and along the folds. Polythene bags of sheets are ideal to protect this seldom used linen. Polythene's semi-transparency makes it possible to select at a glance the needed article. And the piles on the closet shelves need not lose their neat appearance: polythene is soft and flexible and wraps wonderfully around the precious linens. Another good idea is to store wool blankets in polythene bags to protect them against moths. After the clean blankets have been placed into the bags, as much air as possible should be forced out and the loose ends gathered with an elastic band.

Local Talent Wins Events

Powered by Chick Roughhead's grand slam, Coleman tennis players ran off with the majority of titles at the Lethbridge Tennis Club tournament, two finals of which were run off Sunday.

Roughhead, veteran Southern Alberta tennis star, captured the men's singles, teamed with Duke Kwasney to take the men's doubles, and last Sunday teamed with Mrs. Kwasney to walk off with the mixed doubles.

Saturday, Jim Wilkie, 18-year old Coleman player, took the junior men's singles title in an upset victory. A dark-horse entry, he battled past highly favored Ralph Redding of Lethbridge 6-4 in the semis and then swept over Robert Scott, 6-2, 6-3 in the finals.

Using powerful ground strokes and accurate placements to top advantage, Roughhead, had little trouble in getting his less-experienced foe, Marv Kirchner of Lethbridge, taking him out in straight sets, 6-1, 6-3.

However the Coleman men's doubles team of Roughhead and Kwasney had to climb back up from the floor, before beating Al Neils and Erik Thompson of Lethbridge in the finals.

The Lethbridge pair took the first set 6-3, and then dropped the second, 6-2, to leave the match tied. The locals took a quick lead in the third set, and at one time had Roughhead and Kwasney down 5-4 and match point, only to lose out by a 9-7 count.

Finals of the mixed and ladies' doubles were held last Sunday, and the ladies' singles finale is to be run off at a future date.

Club officials were highly pleased with the tourney, which they consider to have been the best held in the city since the Civic Centre courts were opened. Especially gratifying was the heavy Coleman representation, which came up with top notch competition in every event.

Coleman Artists Win Talent Prizes At Michel-Natal

Coleman talent won first, second, and third prizes at the Michel-Natal Talent Show on Sunday. All Coleman entries were organized by Mrs. Buckna.

Placing second was a tap dance routine by Miss Darlene Corrin, third going to Ann Bodish with her rendition of "In the Valley of the Moon." Accompaniment was supplied by Miss Jo - Ann Montalbetti on the piano, Betty Petuk on violin and Georgina Misura on accordion.

Also performing from Coleman were Alan Gate and Nickie Misura in accordion duet and a square dance by Coleman Senior High School.

Many Ways To Skin A Cat

A New Yorker is telling friends about an experience he had down East. Entering the outskirts of a small New England town, he wasn't driving recklessly, but he was clocking it a trifle above the posted speed limit. As he rounded a bend he saw half a dozen cars parked off the road, and a police officer signaling him to stop. When the officer approached him, pulling out his book, the New Yorker figured he was caught in a speed trap.

The officer reminded him politely about the speed limit and estimated accurately how much faster the motorist had been going. "In this town," the officer told him gravely, "that could cost you $50 or even a spell in jail."

Then, before the victim could get a word in, the officer's face lighted up and he asked, as if reciting a carefully memorized piece and getting a kick out of it, "Did I hear you say, sir, that you were hurrying down to our local Red Cross headquarters to donate a pint of blood in the drive we are now conducting?" It didn't take the New Yorker very long to allow that was exactly what he had been doing.

"Well, now," the officer said approvingly, putting away his book and motioning toward the parked cars, "you just get in line behind those other patriotic folks, and I'll lead the way myself, so no one will bother you and you won't get lost."

Gamma Globulin - What It Is

Gamma globulin, in areas where poliomyelitis is prominent, has attracted widespread interest. In some areas the demand for its protective action has been violently insistent beyond any possibility of its being satisfied. What is this wonderful substance?

Gamma globulin is the specific portion of human blood containing the protective factors which render people immune from a disease which they have previously contracted. It thus carries protection against all commonly occurring infectious diseases having a more or less permanent immunity, e.g. measles, chicken pox, infectious jaundice and mumps. Since most adults have contracted "polio" in a mild and undiagnosable form, the gamma globulin extracted from their blood is effective against this disease. In preparation the blood is pooled so that the resulting gamma globulin contains the degree of immunity enjoyed by the adult population in general. When a sufficient amount of this product is injected a temporary immunity from polio is achieved. It lasts for some five weeks or so. This immunity, properly used, may save a life or the use of a limb where polio is prevalent.

Gamma globulin is costly. At wholesale commercial rates it would cost from about $10 to $40, according to the dose required. Because of this, it is evident that its use must be controlled to assure its greatest effectiveness and in Canada it must be clearly understood that this is a responsibility of the government which is making its large scale manufacture possible. The Department of Public Health will govern its distribution according to the need. The Canadian Red Cross is responsible only for the collection of blood to enable the manufacture of gamma globulin.

Without the Canadian Red Cross support, this gamma globulin program would be scarcely possible at all. It is only because the Red Cross can command a very large amount of free voluntary support in its work that this portion of the blood program can be carried out. What other organization could undertake the provision of 150,000 bottles of blood per year at such low cost? Indeed, what other organization could command the voluntary support of so many willing blood donors?

By entering into the government's gamma globulin program, the Red Cross Blood Transfusion Service is able to assure its blood donors that their contribution has yet another avenue by means of which health and even life may be assured. It should not be forgotten, however, that the immediate provision of fresh blood for use in our hospitals is by far the most important part of the B.T.S. work. The provision of plasma for use in emergencies ranks second. Other important medical uses for blood products will come in the near future. The Canadian Red Cross supporters can look forward with pride to the increasingly important role which they play, through their participation in the Society's blood transfusion program.

Statistics Credit Gamma Globulin

Gamma globulin is not a certain preventative against polio, but "until something better comes along," its use should be continued and the classes of those given it should be broadened.

The Manitoba health department said Saturday it had made this "definite recommendation" to the central polio committee at Ottawa. The recommendation was made after provincial health department officials and members of the Manitoba polio committee discussed results of the preventative in last year's polio epidemic. Manitoba had 2,338 cases and 86 deaths in 1953.

Officials said that reports in the United States that gamma globulin is of very little use are exaggerated.

They said evidence that gamma globulin is effective although not entirely "fool proof" is contained in health department files. In Manitoba during last year's epidemic, only nine of 4,000 persons receiving gamma globulin inoculations later contracted the disease. Seven of the nine did not have paralysis.

The recommendation also urged the central committee to increase the age range to which gamma globulin is made available and also to broaden the "contacts" to which it will be given.

Is Alberta Penalizing Youth?

This past year has watched Coleman residents aroused twice in moves by the Department of Education. In the first instance Coleman people fought against inclusion of Coleman Schools in a large division. Secondly they deplored the departments decision to allow 6 week students to become teachers.

Proud of their schools and teaching staff, Coleman wanted no part of any plan to could disrupt the harmony and record of achievement. By no means would they entrust education to someone who had completed six weeks of training. To most residents progressive education failed to properly equip a student in the basic subjects, however they did feel that local teachers were doing a good job following the curriculum as set down for them. Coleman students were showing up better than in many other centers.

To some the very idea of questioning the Department was rank heresy and those in the thick of battle were classed unprogressive.

However the following report from the Calgary Herald shows how wrong the Department of Education has been in the past. What will happen when students under the guidance of the Six Week Wonders want to enter University. Will an entire generation of students be penalized for lack of common sense at Edmonton?

VARSITIES LOOK ASKANCE

There's no short cut to a good education whether it be Alberta's revised grade 12 curriculum or any other diluted course of study.

Graduates of the 1954 grade 12 course in Alberta have found this out in recent weeks. A number of these class products of the new watered-down curriculum are receiving frosty welcomes at the universities of their choice.

Although in the past this province's matriculants have had little difficulty in meeting entrance qualifications of universities in other parts of Canada, some of this year's class products of the new watered-down curriculum are receiving frosty welcomes at the universities of their choice.

Prior to the 1952-53 term analytical geometry and trigonometry made up a credit course in the grade 12 curriculum. Algebra was also a credit course in the curriculum. The course introduced last fall is a composite of the three subjects.

Students suffering most from the loss of trigonometry and analytical geometry are those planning engineering courses. Some have been admitted but only by "courtesy" and universities have indicated that those with proper qualifications will be given first consideration.

Of universities questioned about entrance requirements, Dalhousie University at Halifax replied, "matriculation must include algebra and geometry to enter any faculty at Dalhousie University."

University of Toronto officials said they would recognize Alberta senior matriculation certificates but went on to explain that the faculty of applied science and most other science faculties will require algebra, geometry and trigonometry and usually physics and chemistry of senior matriculation. If an Alberta student has these specified subjects we will admit him."

The University of British Columbia replied: "For admission to applied science courses full senior matriculation is required, including algebra and analytical geometry, chemistry and physics. Qualified applicants from any province are accepted to Sept. 18. No student is admitted with defective standings."

At the University of Western Ontario in London, "analytical geometry and trigonometry are required for admission to every science course."

The University of Manitoba expressed surprise that analytic geometry and trigonometry had been dropped from the Alberta grade 12 curriculum as a credit course. "Surely this cannot be correct," the registrar of the university stated, adding "a student wishing to enter engineering or architecture here must have grade 12 mathematics." He explained this meant algebra, analytical geometry and trigonometry.

Alberta's deputy minister of education, Dr. W. H. Swift, declined in Edmonton to comment on the situation which has arisen from changes in the province's grade 12 curriculum and on possible changes to be introduced this year.

Calgary high school officials and principals also were silent on the subject.

If the number of Alberta students with deficient standing remains small, it is likely outside universities will do all they can to help them meet the required standing during their first university year.

However, should the number of students seeking higher education outside the province increase, as present trends indicate, those universities may decide to turn thumbs down on the student with questionable standing.

Trigonometry and analytical geometry deficiencies are not the only sore points in the Alberta education picture. The two years of French training which Alberta students now receive in high school do not measure up to standards in other provinces. Most provinces require at least three years of French for matriculation and some give their students the benefit of four and five years tuition in the language which is the mother tongue of millions of Canadian citizens.

The University of British Columbia has already indicated it is not willing to accept students from Alberta to its arts and science faculty with only two years of French study.

The B. C. university has long been the chosen university of many Albertans and it is to be feared that in the future students may be turned away from U.B.C. due to inadequate preparation in Alberta high schools.

Rumors circulating in the province in recent suggest the Alberta department of education has resigned the error of its ways and is at present planning to offer trigonometry in academic high schools to those students who will require it for their university courses. It is expected the course will be optional and will be offered as a correspondence course.

No word of changes in the two-year French course has been heard.

Opponents of the new system wonder why the academic student should be penalized by a watered-down curriculum, which will jeopardize his chances at the university level, in order to make education simpler for the non-academic students.

They insist well-educated students need not be mass-produced under any system and it is certain universities are not going to lower their standards to satisfy Alberta.

A doctor, a lawyer, an engineer or an architect must, they say, be prepared to take on more difficult tasks today than ever before in view of the increasing complexity of the modern world, and it follows that these professionals, people to hold their place in present day society, must begin their careers with a solid foundation of secondary education.

THEATRE NOTES

"Knock On Wood"

Paramount's new Technicolor comedy, "Knock On Wood," represents the combined efforts of the most brilliant assemblage of entertainment talent to operate in recent years in Hollywood. This film, which opens on Sept. 2 at the Theatre, stars Danny Kaye, whose dazzling reputation as a performer is unrivalled on both sides of the Atlantic, with Mai Zetterling, one of the most outstanding of the postwar European actresses, and a worthy successor to her Swedish compatriots, Greta Garbo and Ingrid Bergman, judging by her work in "Torment."

Filmed independently for Paramount for Dena Productions, "Knock On Wood" was scripted, directed and produced by Norman Panama and Melvin Frank, a team of young movie-makers whose impressive list of credits include "Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House" and "Above and Beyond." In addition, "Knock On Wood" is highlighted by special comedy and musical material for Danny Kaye by Sylvia Fine (Mrs. Kaye), who has been responsible in the past for some of the actor's most famous routines ("Melody in 4F," "Tschalkovsky" and "Anatole of Paris").

The virtuoso talents of Mr. and Mrs. Kaye and Panama and Frank have been backed up by the services of some of the most gifted individuals in their particular fields. Michael Kidd, fresh from his triumphs as the choreographer on "Guys and Dolls," "Can-Can" and "The Band Wagon," was commissioned to create dances for Kaye. Victor Young, Academy Award-winning composer, was signed to write and conduct the musical score. Danny Fapp was secured to direct the Technicolor photography on the picture.

After signing Mai Zetterling for the co-starring role, which also is her first American screen part, the Kayes, Panama and Frank filled the top supporting cast with such distinguished stage and screen performers as Torin Thatcher, David Burns, Leon Askin, Abner Biberman, Gavin Gordon, Otto Waldis, Steven Geray, Diana Adams, one of America's leading ballerinas and Patricia Denis, also prominent as a dancer.

In "Knock On Wood" Kaye portrays a ventriloquist whose fear of marriage brings him to the verge of a nervous breakdown. When he goes to visit a psychoanalyst in Switzerland, Danny becomes involved with rival espionage gangs. Later in England, where he continues his treatment under the care of a beautiful lady doctor (Mai Zetterling), he finds himself (a) in love with his doctor, and (b) accused of murder. His efforts to escape the police and the real killers are climaxed by a hilarious chase through London and the countryside. Kaye finally seeks refuge disguised as a member of a Russian ballet company, which is almost disrupted by his antics.

The hilarious ballet routines were created by Michael Kidd and special music was composed by Sylvia Fine. Diana Adams, who has often appeared with ballet companies at the City Center, The Metropolitan Opera House and other great concert centers, is "starred" with Kaye in the dance sequence, but she plays her role straight.

The musical director for "Knock On Wood," Victor Young, has in the past year come up with the smash song hit, "Ruby," from the score of "Ruby Gentry." He is well known for his motion picture scores for such outstanding films as "Shane," "The Quiet Man," and "Little Boy Lost."

With "Knock On Wood," Edith Head, Paramount's famed costume designer, entered a new field. Heretofore, she has confined her talents to designing glamorous and breath-taking new clothes for Hollywood's top feminine stars. But with this picture, for the first time she designed an outfit for a man—the wild costumes worn by Danny Kaye.

Quick Cleaning Is Good Cleaning

The fast service offered by modern dry cleaners is especially welcome in the summer time when hard-to-spare summer suits and slacks need frequent cleaning. With today's techniques, fast cleaning service is just as safe and thorough for delicate garments as for the more hardy ones. Cleaners use a superior fluid for their quick jobs which has the advantage of leaving no odor on garments even when they are worn immediately after cleaning. This new solvent, coupled with modern methods of drying and pressing, make possible speedy dry cleaning with no sacrifice to high quality.
